Cal Poly rodeo queen crowned

By Julie Anne Lauer
Staff Writer

A freshman animal science major was crowned the new Miss Cal Poly Rodeo Queen Thursday night at Madonna Inn.

Lynnette Woolery was presented the title after three days of testing, interviews and speeches.

'Many people think a queen is just a pretty face; its not that way at all'

— Janelle Flanigan

Lori Hall, a sophomore animal science major, was named first runner-up, and will represent Cal Poly if for some reason the present queen cannot fulfill her duties.

Woolery said she has had a lot of past experience with rodeo queen contests. She was named Miss Kernville Rodeo Queen in 1985 and was third runner-up in the Miss Rodeo California finals.

"I love to promote rodeo; I've been successful in the past," Woolery said. "I will just do my best to make this a good year for everyone and do a good job for Cal Poly."

The new queen will receive a $500 scholarship donated by a member of the rodeo boosters. She will also represent Cal Poly at the National Intercollegiate Rodeo finals in Bozeman, Montana in June to compete for the title of National Rodeo Queen, said Janelle Flanigan, Miss Cal Poly Rodeo 1986.

According to Flanigan, there is more to being rodeo queen than most people think.

"Many people think a queen is just a pretty face; its not that way at all," Flanigan said. "You need to be able to speak to people ... be very versatile ...

and (have) a lot of common sense. It takes an all-around type of person."

Flanigan said the role of Miss Cal Poly Rodeo is to promote the sport of intercollegiate rodeo. The queen will reign at the Poly Royal and fall rodeos, make radio and television promotions and appear with the Poly Royal queen during the opening ceremonies at Poly Royal.

There are many reasons for competing for Miss Cal Poly rodeo other than just the title, according to the contestants.

"My favorite sport is rodeo and I wanted to help to build the sport," Hall said. "I want to let everyone know what the sport is about, and I love the competition ... I would probably do it all over again."

The contestants for the title were required to complete a 50-question written test on rodeo rules and knowledge, demonstrate their ability to ride horses, and complete personal interviews with the judges.

The contestants were also required to model two outfits, (one western style), present a three- to four- minute speech about some aspect of rodeo and to answer impromptu questions from the judges.

The Garden Room at the Madonna Inn and the outfits for the non-western modeling portion of the contest were provided free by Madonna Inn.

Payback approved to cover fire losses

By Matt Weiser

Students and teachers who lost property in the Engineering West fire during Poly Royal last year will be reimbursed, said an analyst for the State Board of Control.

Gerald Jones said that the board decided in a hearing Wednesday to award a group claim totaling $24,516.19. Jones said the claim was placed on the board's consent agenda, which means there was little opposition to granting it.

"There was no opposition to the awarding of these claims," said Jones. "There was in effect no real hearing. All the board had to do was approve it."

The Engineering West building primarily housed a number of architecture labs. Items lost included books, drawings, laboratory materials and equipment, and some personal items, such as stereos and clothing. But Jones said the claim could include only those items essential to actual class activity, and personal items could not be covered.

Charlene Dekker, an architecture student who lost property in the fire, is a representative for a group of students who made up one of the classes in the building. She said the students and teachers who lost property in the fire got together to submit one large claim for the total damage. But Dekker said it was a little more complicated than a mere insurance claim. "The State of California does not carry insurance on their buildings," she said. "What we are doing is suing the State of California to get our money back."

Dekker was relieved that the board decided to award the claim, but said that getting it done hasn't been an easy process.

Smoking in the UU is no longer allowed

By Catherine Hernandez

Staff Writer

The University Union Advisory Board voted Thursday to prohibit smoking in all public areas of the University Union. The decision was made at an open meeting in the U.U., but there was no one there to oppose the proposition.

Previously, smoking had been allowed in the billiards area of Rec Sports. The decision to prohibit smoking completely came in response to complaints by Rec Sports and people who said they felt the smoke was an unhealthy annoyance.

"Smoking in the union is out of here. It's walking!" said Bretten Osterfeld, UUAB chairman. Osterfeld said he felt that allowing people to smoke in the billiards area was unfairly subjecting non-smoking students to the smoke.

Representatives from Rec Sports said they were very pleased with the UUAB's decision. "We're all for it. The board has not notified us as to when it will be implemented, but if it was up to us we would do it right away," said Mark Gasta, intramurals coordinator for Rec Sports.

"We think eliminating smoke in the billiards area will be an extremely positive step as far as the health of our minds and bodies are concerned," said Jennifer Smagala, games area manager.

Some students who frequent the games area said they felt the smoking was never much of a problem. "I think it's a pretty good decision, but the smoking never really bothered me except

Below normal temperatures

State has flower shortage

By Jennifer Manor
Staff Writer

Valentine's Day is one of the biggest flower holidays of the year, but many sweethearts won't be getting the traditional dozen red roses due to a supply problem stemming from the below normal temperatures in flower growing areas of California.

San Diego and Santa Barbara are the biggest growing areas in the state. A lot of the flowers from the two areas are shipped to wholesalers and florists in northern California. This year growers in southern California are having problems filling orders because their flower crops have been destroyed by cold weather.

Save the coastline

Picture this: A crystalline day at Montana De Oro. There's no one else around. Sea lions lie on the rocks basking in the sun while in the background oil wells pump rhythmically.

Sound far-fetched? It could become a reality if Interior Secretary Donald Hodel's off-shore oil drilling policy is adopted by Congress. Hodel's plan would open up the coastline to oil lease sales from the San Luis Obispo-Monterey County line south to the Mexican border.

Anyone who cares about the natural beauty of the Central Coast should consider the plan a travesty. To see the possible future of San Luis Obispo's coastline, take a drive down Highway 101 and see what Santa Barbara County looks like. And if it looks bad in a developed area, think how it would look in an otherwise unspoiled area.

We know it sounds rather ironic to recommend taking a drive to see the ugliness of oil drilling, for without the oil drilling there would be no driving. But consider this — California's off-shore resources amount to only 2.8 percent of the nation's total oil and gas reserves, says a senior project scientist at the Natural Resources Defense Council.

The amount of oil off-shore drilling can provide is small. The amount of harm it can do cannot be quantified. It is immeasurable.

The passage of County Measure A, which mandates voter approval for on-shore support facilities, was a step in the right direction. But it was only the first step in what could prove to be a long climb.

Happiest girl in the whole USA

The whole thing came out into the open last Saturday night. I was at Motel Inn Lounge with some friends, sitting in front of a simulated fireplace. There were maybe 11 people in the place counting the three of us. This lounge-y four-piece band was playing "Your Cheatin' Heart."

Then it happened: the band invited this man named Woody, who was at a table across from us, to come up and sing with them. Suddenly, more than anything else in the whole world, I wanted to follow Woody up on that makeshift stage. I wanted to live out my unspoken dream. I wanted to be a country-western singer.

My friends managed to restrain me. I'm not a country-western singer. The band couldn't really play country-western anyway. But they were inviting people up from the audience, and I was wearing my boots. I could have done it if I'd made it up there. I just know it.

All this probably comes as quite a shock to those who think they know me. They know I've never been to a pool hall filled with gamblers. They know I won't even listen to a country-western radio station. They know me as semi-urban, semi-sophisticated — a semi-lover of The Arts. I guess if they were to predict my fantasies, they'd say, "She wants to be an obscure-but-heralded novelist," or "She wants to be Meryl Streep for a day," or even, "She wants to try all 99 Revlon lipstick shades." No one would ever say, "She wants to be a sexy, brassy country-western singer who croons about two timin' men and honky tonks." I just seem too shy and tasteful, I guess.

PAST DEADLINE

But the thing they don't understand is, there are just certain things even I can't tasteful my way out of.

See, when I was a little girl, my family used to drive cross country to visit my grandparents in the Ozarks. We did this every summer for six or eight years. We drove through Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas with the windows rolled down and the radio on. I remember hearing songs by Merle Haggard and Kitty Wells, and singing along because there wasn't much else to do. I didn't like country-western music then, and I'm still not sure I like it now, but that's beside the point.

The country-western stuff got to me anyhow. I've felt Mississippi mud squish up through my toes. I've spent hours catching frogs out by my grandpa's pond. I've chased chickens around in the red dust while the sun shone down through the heavy green summer air. I've eaten chili served up by Ruby and Wanda in greasy diners on the side of the road.

And now, eight or 10 years later, I just can't get around the inner desires that this sort of childhood inspires.

Growing up in California with friends named Carina and Sherece doesn't mean anything when you've got relatives named LaDarla and Una Lou. A five-year subscription to Vogue doesn't keep me from wondering what I'd look like in a big yellow hairdo wearing glitter-blue western wear (hopefully with fringe of some sort). And in spite of singing polite little fa-la-la madrigals all through high school, I still hum "Blue Eyes Cryin' in the Rain" as I hunt for a parking spot.

Shoot. I want to be Patsy Cline. Or at least Tammy Wynette. Don't laugh at me. I'm serious here. There's just no getting around it.

I cringe to admit this, but I'd give up any hope of ever owning a Chanel gown for just 10 minutes on stage at the Grand Ol' Opry and a chance to sing one maudlin love-gone-wrong song.

Years of civilization have done nothing for me. Nothing.

No matter what I might do to avoid it, I know that someday I'll find myself on stage at a Holiday Inn in Needles, California, microphone in hand, singing "Blue Moon of Kentucky."

I'll be a happy woman, because I know that someday, my cheatin' heart will tell on me.

letters to the editor

Uninformed opinions exasperate reader

Editor — I find it frustrating to be constantly reading columns by people who spout off their opinions about religion without taking the time to find out what they're talking about.

Jerry McKay wrote his column (Feb. 5) on a quote from Genesis — God made people in His image. McKay failed to read on. God created perfect people in His image, and in His benevolence, gave them free will. They used that free will to tell off God and His guidelines.

If we were ceramic bowls, it would be the equivalent of using free will to break ourselves. You don't look for the artist's trademark or image in broken artwork. You look at the intact pieces.

So far, there has been only one "intact" person in history: Jesus Christ. Look at Jesus and you'll find out what God is really like. And Jerry, do your homework.

The strange case of the miraculous recovery

Editor — I see where Lone Justice recently played three nights (Feb. 4-6) in Los Angeles, just a week after canceling their scheduled Cal Poly show because of Maria McKee's throat problem. Did her polyp miraculously disappear, or what? Perhaps someone on the concert committee can shed some light on this mysterious matter.

Beirut kidnappers give ultimatum

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — An American hostage said in a videotape dropped off by his kidnappers Sunday that he and three other men, including two Americans, will be killed if Israel fails to release 400 Arab prisoners within 24 hours.

A six-minute videotape showing Boston native Alann Steen, 47, was delivered to a Western news agency in the name of Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine, which kidnapped Steen and three others from the campus of Beirut University College on Jan. 24.

Israel indicated Sunday it was willing to discuss the swap of an Israeli airman missing in Lebanon for the release of the 400 Arab prisoners, a proposal advanced Saturday by Nabih Berri, head of the main Shiite Amal militia and Lebanon's justice minister.

Cease-fire expires in Philippines

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A 60-day truce with Communist rebels formally expired Sunday without hope of extension, and the government said it would step up military patrols while pursuing peace talks on a regional level.

A rebel umbrella group urged its members to "wage militant and unremitting struggles on all fronts." Some groups have said they opposed regional talks.

The head of the committee that monitored compliance with the cease-fire urged President Corazon Aquino to intervene to prevent a civil war.

Cal Poly's Errol Talley looks to pass the ball around Dominguez Hills' William Alexander on Saturday.

Poly women win pair of nailbiters

Karin Tindall
Staff Writer

The women's basketball team had an impressive weekend, winning both its nailbiting games when wins were very much needed.

The Mustangs upset second place Chapman College on Thursday night 59-58, ending a three-game losing streak, and then turned around on Saturday to beat Cal State Dominguez

Hills 65-63, bringing their conference record to 4-4.

Although Cal Poly coach Jill Orrock was pleased with the wins, she said they were a little too close for her to take. She added that the wins prove she can count on her team in a tight situation. "I know they can keep their heads in it. I don't worry about it too much."

The Mustangs took a tough stand against Dominguez Hills and held on to win it with a free throw by Sherrie Atteberry with seconds left.

Atteberry, who led the scoring with 18 points, was four of four on free throws and set a Cal Poly record for most rebounds in a game, coming up with a game total of 24.

Janet Jorgensen had 15 points, came up with seven rebounds and made five of six free throws.

Mustangs tied for third after split

By Elmer Ramos
Staff Writer

The Cal Poly men's basketball team has gotten away with cold shooting before. But against Cal State Dominguez Hills Saturday, a paltry shooting percentage was aggravated by a furious rally by the Toros.

The Mustangs could not overcome either factor, as Dominguez Hills erased an eight-point deficit to nip Poly, 43-41, before 1,470 at the Main Gym.

Poly, which entered the weekend with a chance to take sole possession of second place in the California Collegiate Athletic Association, dropped to 6-4. Despite a surprisingly easy 84-69 victory over Chapman College Friday, Poly falls into a tie with Cal State Northridge for third place. Dominguez Hills, which climbed to 7-3, sits alone in second place.

The Mustangs, who must finish in the top four to qualify for the CCAA tournament, have only four contests left to solidify their position. Poly will head south next weekend to battle league-leading UC Riverside and Cal Poly Pomona. The Mustangs will then return home for their final two games.

Poly used strong defense to build a 23-16 halftime advantage over the Toros. Then the shooting woes struck, as the Mustangs connected on only six of their 28 second-half shots.

Dominguez Hills took advantage of Poly's cold hand, using four three-point shots to chop the deficit to one point, 41-40, with three minutes remaining. The Toros' Vico Nomaaea hit another three-pointer to give Dominguez Hills a 43-41 lead with 29 seconds left.

After Poly's Melvin Parker missed a layup with six seconds left, Dominguez Hills' William Alexander was fouled and sent to the line. Alexander promptly missed the free throw, allowing the Mustangs to rebound, bring the ball to midcourt and call a timeout with two seconds remaining.

When play resumed, Mark Otta had trouble finding an open man to receive the inbounds pass. He finally passed to Jeff Gray in the backcourt. Gray passed back to Otta, but the ball was still in mid-flight when the horn sounded.

"The first option was for Sean (Chambers) to cut to the basket for a lob, but they (Dominguez Hills) defended that real well," said Poly coach Steve Beason. "The second option was to look back for Otta, but evidently, it was a short two seconds."

Beason conceded that the Mustangs' inability to bury their shots, namely layups, was the decisive blow. Poly finished the game with only a .302 shooting percentage.

Gymnasts take first at Pomona

By Kimberly Patraw
Staff Writer

Mustang gymnasts took first place at Cal Poly Pomona on Saturday.

The Mustangs won the three-team meet with a score of 160.95. Southern Utah State placed second with 148 points and Pomona took third with 118.15 points.

The San Luis Obispo women won every event and swept the vaulting event with their highest score of the season. Mary Kay Humble, with a season-high score of 8.85, took first place. Julie Williams took second, Mimi Phene came in third and Julie Bolen took fourth.

Bolen also took second on the floor, first on the balance beam and won the all-around competition with a score of 33.5.

Phene netted two first place wins in floor and balance beam competition and second place in the all-around.

Suzi Greene placed second in the bars, while Williams finished third in the beam and floor and fourth in the all-around.

Despite the win and the top placements, team members were not pleased with the meet. Coach Tim Rivera explained that the team took it easy this week because of midterms and had expected to win the meet.

Team member Wendy Meyer

said, "The equipment was from the dark ages and there was nothing to pump us up."

Rivera said there were about 20 people watching the meet and at least half of those were San Luis Obispo students or family members. According to Rivera, Mustang home meets "draw the biggest crowds of any meet we go to."

The Mustangs will compete again Friday at Davis against Cal State Long Beach and East Washington and Saturday at an eight-team invitational in Chico where Cal Poly will face Seattle Pacific, defending national champions, for the first time this season.

Tar Heels pick up win over Virginia

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — J.R. Reid completed a three-point play with 1:36 remaining in overtime and third-ranked North Carolina held off Virginia for a 74-73 victory in Atlantic Coast Conference basketball Sunday.

The victory enabled Coach Dean Smith to win 20 games for the 17th consecutive season and was the 599th in his career, all at North Carolina. The Tar Heels are 20-2 and have not lost in nine conference games.

Reid, who finished with 21 points, hit two free throws with 57 seconds left in regulation to give North Carolina a 69-67 edge, but two free throws by Mel Kennedy with 33 seconds remaining tied the score.

Joe Wolf scored 16 points before fouling out and Kenny Smith added 12 for the Tar Heels.

Andrew Kennedy led Virginia with 19 points.

Cal Poly's Susan Norman hits a forehand against UC Riverside on Friday.

Tennis team earns shutout of Riverside

By Ken Miller

Staff Writer

The Cal Poly women's tennis team trounced UC Riverside in its conference opener on Friday 9-0 to bring its overall record to 2-1.

Five of the six Cal Poly singles players won their matches in straight sets. Number one singles player Wendy Elliott demolished Riverside's Erica Shuh 6-2, 6-1; Number two player Susan Norman won 6-2, 7-5; Ci-Ci Barbe won 6-2, 6-1; Amy Lansford won 6-0, 6-1; and Lynn Dyson came away with a 6-2, 6-0 win. Number five singles player Barbara Cunningham won 4-6, 6-2, 6-3.

Poly's women's tennis team has never had any trouble with Riverside in the past, said coach Miguel Phelps.

"We've beaten them 9-0 for the past three years. They used to be better, but since their scholarships were cut, they haven't been able to recruit. They didn't make us play to our best, so it wasn't our best performance. Still, we played and we won," Phelps said.

Poly had no trouble with the less-than-enthusiastic Highlanders, finishing them off in singles in less than two hours. With a 6-0 lead, Poly cleaned up in the doubles matches, winning in straight sets. Elliott and Lansford won 6-2, 6-0; Norman and Cunningham won 6-1, 6-1; and Dyson and Barbe finished off with a 6-2, 6-2 win.

After playing the University of San Francisco and the University of Santa Clara this weekend, Poly will travel to Cal Poly Pomona on Saturday. Phelps is optimistic about the way the Mustangs are playing, saying, "When my team is capable of winning 9-0, they do win 9-0."

Friday — this time from the free-throw line. Despite connecting on only 17 of 34 of their free throws, Poly whipped Chapman 84-69.

Sixty percent shooting from the floor compensated for the problems at the line, however, as the Mustangs had little trouble penetrating the heart of Chapman's defense for easy layups. Poly held a 33-27 lead at halftime and led by as many as 23 in the second half.

Sean Chambers was the game's leading scorer, hitting 10 of his 13 attempts for 24 points.

Chapman was led by David Roth, who tossed in 17.

WOMEN

Julie Jordan and Sherinne Barlow scored nine points each and Kim Lackore added eight to help the Mustangs to victory.

Orrock said it was a big weekend for her team, but added that she wanted the Mustangs to play tougher. "We should have buried the (other) team," she said.

Orrock gave Dominguez Hills credit for hanging in there, but also gave her own players credit. "Our girls didn't fold under the pressure."

Against Chapman, the Lady Mustangs played strong and held the score to within a few points. Atteberry led the scoring with 22 points and Jorgensen added 12.

Orrock said that in the Chapman game the Mustangs came out in a man-to-man defense and were more aggressive than usual.

Orrock also commented that her team is still playing together and that the Mustangs have a "good shot at UC Riverside and Pomona next week."

FLOWERS

One wholesaler/grower from San Diego said more than 30 percent of the producing floral crop was destroyed by bad weather. The margarite daisy crop was totally destroyed, the baby's breath crop 90 percent destroyed and miscellaneous field flowers (cornflower, wax flower) were 70 percent destroyed.

Dan Tresko, owner of Mission Flower Shippers in San Diego, said many of the plants have been destroyed by frost damage. Also, the extended cool weather has delayed flower production by putting the plants in a dormancy state. The traditional Valentine's Day flowers, roses and carnations, are grown in greenhouses, but the cool weather has made it hard to keep greenhouses at optimum producing temperatures. Tresko said, "Many florists are having to buy flowers from the European and South American market at three times the price of the domestic market price."

Fran Johnston at Clark's San Luis Obispo Florist said the freeze has definitely affected business. "We buy our roses from Nipomo and the wholesale prices have skyrocketed. Clark's had to raise the price on a dozen long-stemmed roses by about six dollars," said Johnston.

Wholesale prices for a single rose have approximately tripled, but florists are making little profit in order to keep their prices low. At Clark's, a dozen roses usually sell for $42.95 but are now going for $49.99.

Johnston said Clark's is concerned that the Valentine holiday falls on a three-day weekend. The store relies on Cal Poly students for much of the business. "A lot of students will probably leave town, which will cut our orders," she said.

A few clubs on campus had planned to sell roses for Valentine's Day but decided against the plan because of high prices or a lack of availability of flowers. Patty Keer of Cal Poly Peer Health Educators said, "We called florists and farms but they all said there was a shortage of flowers and were having trouble filling orders."

Rose Float Club President Donna Jones said the club usually orders flowers from Ashne Farms in Nipomo. "We were going to sell roses but found out the wholesale price was three times higher than normal. We just wouldn't be able to make a profit off the sales," said Jones.

The little sisters of Alpha Gamma Rho are also selling flowers for Valentine's Day. A representative from Alpha Gamma Rho said there wasn't any difficulty in getting the order filled by a florist, but the roses are more expensive so the group is selling only 100.
